

VITALITY competition winner:

AgVita are pleased to announce the winner of the 'Where's AgVita been now?' competition from the Spring '13 edition of Vitality magazine. We received a variety of correct and incorrect entries in the week following the newsletter. Sadly, no stories of personal embarrassment were supplied, and the location did indeed prove harder than previous examples to identify

The pictures of course were recently taken at The Almond Train (also known as the Carriage Café) in McLaren Vale, South Australia.

An honourable mention and runner-up prize goes to Matt in Victoria for identifying the location and puzzling over why the café is named after almonds when located in the middle of a premium wine district!

However, the clear winner of this newsletter's main prize is.....Rosie in Tasmania. Well done Rosie, your prize is in the mail. Not only did Rosie correctly identify the location, she even penned a poem describing her last visit to this wonderful region! – this is what it takes to win the prize....

This is a young maidens short tale
Of one summer day in McClaren Vale
She drank lots of wine
And thought it was fine....
....until her balance began to fail

She teetered at the cellar door
And almost kissed the Hardy's floor
Unsteadily down the Main Road of the Vale
She came across the Carriage Café, on the Shiraz Trail
And slumped on the steps as her feet could carry her no more

Once under some shade
Her intoxication began to fade
Then she re-hydrated
Was again invigorated
And craved another vintage William made

Well done to Rosie, Matt and all those who entered. Keep an eye out for our next competition, where the location will once again prove challenging.
